WORLD NEWSWIRE

1. UK unemployment rate was unchanged at 4.1% in the three months to October, matched expectation. However, wage growth was rather impressive. Both average weekly earnings including bonus and excluding bonus rose more than expected. Wage growth was fastest since 2008.
2. ZEW President Achim Wambach noted the assessment of the economic situation has worsened dramatically for both Germany and the Eurozone.

FX VIEW

BJP suffered a whitewash the state elections, losing the three bastions, Rajasthan, Chhattisgarh and MP. This raises the political risk considerably going into 2019. However, there are historical precedents, like in 2008-09, when the party that did well in these states (BJP) went on to do poorly in the national elections. That may well become the case this time too, as Congress may have strong state leaders and credible public faces but they may not yet have the match for Mr. Modi at the national level. Mr. Modi still commands a significant popularity at the ground level and if BJP can be successful in ensuring that 2019, like 2014, becomes like a pseudo presidential election, then BJP may fair well. Nevertheless, uncertainties will remain. There has been a sizable swing in the vote share from BJP to Congress in these three states. MP, Chhattisgarh and Rajasthan contribute 65 seats to Lok Sabha and during 2014, BJP had won 59 of those seats. A loss of seats in the heartland and north India has to be made up somewhere else, or country could be looking towards a hung Parliament in 2019. These apprehension would keep risk premium high and could corrode the premium that Indian equities are enjoying relative to our peers in the EM basket.

The Government yesterday appointed Shaktikanta Das the Governor of the Reserve Bank of India. He retired as Secretary, Department of Economic Affairs (DEA) in 2017, will be the 25th Governor of the RBI. Given the stormy relationship between the Finance Ministry and the RBI in recent times, Das may be able to smoothen the ruffled feathers as he has been on the RBI board in his capacity as the DEA Secretary; the DEA is seen as the bridge between the Finance Ministry and the RBI. However, the risk is market could see his appointment as direct attack on the Independence of the central bank. There are already expectations that he may soften the stance of RBI on matters related on bailing out troubled shadow banking sector and go slow on taking punitive actions against the banking sector, in matters related to stressed assets and corporate governance. At this point these are just conjectures but if they turn out to be true, then Rupee can react quite adversely and depreciate. Keep a watch.

In Global news, UK PM may face a no confidence vote soon and that will continue to drag GBP lower. Lawmakers aren't very happy about PM May's decision to delay the "meaningful vote" in order to buy more time to renegotiate with EU leaders in hopes of getting the deal through parliament. There media reports that UK lawmakers may have secured more than 48 votes needed to trigger a no-confidence vote. Domestic political uncertainty is entangled with Brexit uncertainty. As long as these issues remain at top of the mind of traders, GBP may continue to depreciate.

TECHNICAL VIEW & CROSSES:

USDINR remains in an uptrend. Buying on decline is advisable with stops below 71.50 on a daily closing basis. Resistance between 72.60/70 and 73.30/50 on spot.
